E Invitational at Clear Lake, IA

Eddie Cox & Clear Lake -- Run Away Winners

Dave Berg took the mike at the Trophy Presentation to commend Clear Lake, IA for a "most wonderful, most welcoming, most fun" regatta. Clear Lake hospitality was in full force with volunteers everywhere. The Saturday night party was held generously at a private home to the delight of the fleet. Youth, past champions, old salts - it was an amalgamation of the best we have to offer.

PRO Mark DeGuire set six races in a beautiful Friday, trying Saturday and let's-go-home Sunday. He took a local team to begin to train folks who recently took the US Sailing RC course in April at Cedar, WI.

And here are the winners:

Here's the fifth set of scenarios for #FairSailing 2019. These scenarios involve combinations of the rules of Part 3 and 4. These are from Dave Perry's 100 Best Racing Rules Quizzes. Thanks to Dave for granting permission to use his material!

Boat Q is beating towards the finishing line in very light winds and adverse current. Just after her bow crosses the finishing line, she bears away and sails off the course. Boat P protests Q for failing to completely cross the finishing line. You are on the protest committee; how would you decide this? (From Perry, Quiz 50)

The race committee displays flag U as the preparatory signal. At the start, several boats are OCS (on the course side of the starting line) including Boat X. The race committee signals a general recall and restarts the race. Boat X wins the race, but on shore her score is posted as DSO. She requests redress. You are on the protest committee; how would you decide this? (From Perry, Quiz 51)

Scenario 3 - Sculling

Boat A is approaching a port-hand windward mark in very light air, close-hauled on starboard tack. Because she is not quite making the mark, her helmsman puts the tiller to leeward but the boat does not turn enough to miss the mark. In order to turn faster, the helmsman returns the tiller approximately to amidships and forcefully pushes it to leeward several times, being careful to never let the tiller cross the boat's centerline. She clears the mark by about two feet. Now above close-hauled, and to continue turning around the mark, the helmsman pulls the tiller to windward and returns it to approximately amidships several times forcefully in order to turn the boat back down to close-hauled. Boat B protests A for these actions. You are on the protest committee; how would you decide this? (From Perry, Quiz 58)

Click here for answer

Scenario 4 - Damage

Two close-hauled boats on a beat (S and P) are on a collision course. When a couple of lengths away from S, P begins bearing away to pass astern of S. S holds her course. Just as it appears to S that P is about to pass astern, P misjudges her course and collides with S, putting a hole in the aft port corner of S's hull and doing considerable damage to the stern. S protests P and P immediately takes a Two-Turns Penalty. S, after stopping to make some repairs, manages to finish the race though she is unable to proceed at full speed due to the damage. She loses several places as a result. Ashore, S files her protest against P and also requests redress. You are on the protest committee; how would you decide this? (From Perry, Quiz 61)

Scenario 5 - Penalties

With one minute to go before the starting signal, Boat P (on port tack) tries to tack in to leeward of Boat S (on starboard tack). During the tack, S luffs to avoid contact and protests P. P immediately gets clear of S and takes a Two-Turns Penalty before the starting signal has sounded. P gets a good start and crosses S shortly thereafter. S protests P for not doing her Two-Turns Penalty after the starting signal. You are on the protest committee; how would you decide this? (From Perry, Quiz 63)

2019 TRAC Green Fleet

Green Fleet Winner Christopher Horn

A special award was given to Audrey Fortuna who approached the race committee to have her score lowered since she missed a mark. It seems there was a bit of commotion at the first mark. Audrey did not know how to maneuver with the added traffic (a common Green Fleet problem). She reported she should be given NINE extra points to her score. Honestly, rarely are nine Green fleet members so equally skilled. Once in front of the scoresheet with the official scorer, it was discovered that Audrey sailed to a second place finish in that race. What an honest young lady to not quietly accept this high finish. Her score was adjusted down to a more realistic number. Congratulations, Audrey, on your sportsmanship award.
