C's Begin with Two Light Air Races; E's get Snookered

The Wind is Unfortunately as Predicted

The toughest, toughest thing for a PRO is light air. The PRO feels the pressure of providing quality racing and the SI's declare a minimum set of races for a regatta to be valid. In the case of the C's and E's, three races are required to be a regatta. The C's are close but the E's currently stand at zero. They begin the day tomorrow at 9:30 with predicted 5-8 MPH. All you readers, cross your fingers.

Today's afternoon looked promising but as we waited, storms appeared on the radar with no assurance it would not hit. PRO Chip Mann responsibly sent the fleet in as we waited in sub 5mph conditions. Out the fleet went at about 3:00 to some promising puffs for an extended 10 minutes only to need a change in course. One start with a major shift ended in postponement. The fleet waited for another opportunity but racing was called due to near becalm. Actually it was a picture perfect site watching all the boats get towed peacefully to shore.

Race One went off without a hitch.

C start to Race One. A nice view of lineup from Gate Boat's perspective.

Explain to me, please, where the wind is coming from? OR. . am I getting squeezed here?

Shown here are Chris Andert and John Rinaldi. Chris flies in from Florida each year to compete in the ILYA Championships. Then the skipper of the boat marked "23" is Canadian Olympian Luke Ramsey from the Nacra class. He is also a Canadian Sailor of the Year. Luke is married to Annie Haeger (who could not attend this year). It is his second ILYA Championship. He loved us so much he returned. Then the third boat is Anne Porter Muller --- a past ILYA Opti Champ for all you young tykes who might read this. Anne competed in college attending several College Nationals, married, has her own little Opti children and has sailed C's with Joe Skotarszak (there but not seen) since graduating from college. It's safe to say, C sailing is in the blood of all three of these sailors.
