A Nationals on Minnetonka - Two races today

Watch for news on the Melges website and FB

Day two report from Melges' Hannah Noll.

The photos remain spectacular. Melvin is on top but newcomer RJ Porter is giving the M- 21 a run for its money. Go to the ILYA-Inland Lake Yachting Association Facebook page for great photos of a photo finish. Those G-Force I-12 sailors are mighty young. And that exemplifies a lot of what is now Lake Geneva. Youth on every boat, every class. It's an exciting time for them as the youngsters finish sailing school weekdays and adult racing commences with phone calls, "Mom, Mr. X needs a crew. He will take care of my dinner later. May I please stay and race?" The future of the club is in good hands with the wise skippers including youth on nearly every boat.

This is no small regatta. The US and Canadian big names are there. These are the American names you will see challenging Charlie Buckingham next Olympic go-around. Most are still in college but have their lifecycle tuned for 2020.

And more Olympic aspirations as the two Midwest girls test a new boat and sails in Europe. They currently sit 17th but they are gaining consistency with each regatta. Watch for a breakthrough from these two determined women.

Where there's a will, there's a way. Chris Tornehl, brother of Tobin of Pewaukee lives near Eau Claire on a beautiful lake with very little sailing. So he started a yacht club and has begun traveling to regattas to re-discover his skills as a teen. He sat in first at lunch today. Sailing with his son, hope looks bright for a new sailing club, Lake Wissota.

Mike Gehl had a rough start but finished 1-2 on the day.

Ethan Heinze, who has to be a junior, although listed as Open sits in third overall.

At the end of day, Jim and Debbie Gluek sit atop the leaderboard.

And just to see how the day looked, it was tight mark roundings. PRO Mark Prange looks to complete two more races in cold, windy weather beginning at 9:30 AM.
